NBC Connecticut Welcome to the New NBCConnecticut.com! As you can see, we've given the site a facelift overnight – our desktop and mobile sites look completely different this morning than they did last night. Not only that, but they are driven by a brand new back end. This new website is designed with the user in mind. We use modern design with a clean interface, to make it easy for you to find the content you want, and easy to read or see it when you do. We've rebuilt the rear end from scratch to make it faster for you, too. Here are some of the highlights: The home page has a new clean look that highlights the most important stories at the top and then groups stories together by topics as you scroll down the page. An iconic cityscape background at the top of the page roots the top stories of the city itself. Live videos, including newscasts and breaking news events, will be easy to find. When we stream live, you can find the video prominently at the top of the page right next to the lead story. Our weather widget remains a prominent feature on the website, allowing you to access our exclusive radar technology and weather forecasts to plan your day (and your wardrobe). The weather page has been redesigned to make it easier for you to get the most important information you need, including the hourly forecast, the latest forecast from our meteorologists and the 10-day forecast. When we dig deep into a topic, including great stories from our NBC CT Examiner Team and NBC CT Responds, we'll have special articles designed to best highlight storytelling elements. These articles blend text, video, and graphics together to create an immersive user experience. Special events such as the Olympics, Golden Globes and the presidential election will look special. We've created a special home page look for these events when they happen. We've also made changes to the rear end that you can't see but will make your experience better. First of all, our publishing system is much easier to use, so more journalists in our newsroom will be able to contribute to digital platforms. This means that the journalist who knows the story can best own it across all platforms, get you the important information on your TV, computer or phone. We have also simplified the templates that power the site and made it fully responsive. This will make it easier for our development team to maintain the site and build new features. So what you see now is the foundation - we'll keep finding ways to make the experience better for you. Speaking of, we want your feedback. Do you love the new look? Hate it? Is there a feature you're dying to see? Let us know. We are determined to continue to build our digital platforms to make NBC Connecticut the best local news experience. Kerri-Lee Mayland is a multiple Emmy Award-winning anchor on NBC Connecticut. You can see her solo at 11 a.m. and at 4 p.m and 5:30 p.m. along with co-anchor Kevin Nathan. Originally from from British Columbia, Canada, Kerri-Lee became a U.S. citizen during his time at NBC Connecticut and now calls New England home. Kerri-Lee is a broadcast veteran who has been anchoring and reporting for 25 years, in major markets across the country. She began her education on the west coast of Canada at the University of Victoria, where she worked on campus radio station and interned on CHEK 6 TV. She then moved south to the United States to study at the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism at Arizona State University. She was awarded a scholarship to study in the television department, as well as earning national collegiate placements in both TV and Radio during the William Randolph Hearst Competitions two years in a row. She also reported for ASU's Southwinds television program before going on to work on KTAR radio and KSAZ TV (CBS) in Phoenix, AZ. She then did move east after landing an anchor/reporting position on WMDT-TV (ABC) in Salisbury, Maryland. After a year of news on the Delmarva Peninsula, Kerri-Lee was offered a job at WTTG-TV in Washington, D.C. where she launched their breaking news helicopter. During her time reporting and anchoring on FOX 5, she covered everything from the Monica Lewinsky scandal to the disappearance of Chandra Levy to filing live reports for both CNN and Fox News on various assignments. She was asked by the White House to present then-Vice President Al Gore at a traffic summit held in the executive wing. Kerri-Lee then moved to Boston, N.Y., where she accepted a job as a weekend 10 p.m anchor and reporter at FOX Boston. Her duties included traveling to report on every turn of election 2000 from the hanging chads of Tallahassee, FL, to the steps of the Supreme Court in Washington, D.C. which tell the story raged on. It was during her time in Boston she was sent on one of the greatest stories of our generation and reported from the front of the terrible aftermath of 9/11 in New York City. She was embedded with the New England FEMA Task Force hours after the World Trade Center towers collapsed. Kerri-Lee and first responders slept on the floor of the Jacob Javitz Center and took shifts on their way into an area that few other news crews had access to. She and her photographer were awarded a National Headliner's Award for the nearly three weeks of coverage they gave. Kerri-Lee then moved on to FOX Philadelphia, where she became the new co-host of Good Day Philadelphia with Mike Jerrick. During her time in Philadelphia, she launched the station's new 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. newscasts, eventually being promoted to the main 10p.m anchor seat. She also solo anchored a political show called The Last Word during the 2008 election cycle. She was awarded the Emmys for Best News Anchor in the Mid-Atlantic Region twice. She has interviewed countless celebrities and newsmakers, and was featured in W Magazine, PhillyFIT magazine, and Row Home Magazine, which she still writes for as Green Green Editor. When the work-family balance became something she and her husband, Kirt, wanted to put on edge, she joined NBC Connecticut to be near the family and to expand her own family. She had her second child, Katalina, in 2011, and like her older brother Van, both children were born in the country's first hospital established by Ben Franklin. The kids are proud of their Philly roots, but they are certainly being raised as real blue Nutmeggers. Her children are involved in sports, clubs and activities, while Kerri-Lee has been busy covering some of the biggest stories in Connecticut since she arrived in 2010. Despite her busy news schedule, Kerri-Lee has also been very involved in the community in some unique ways. She has a very active role in Make-A-Wish, from hosting Miles for Smiles to emceeing their annual Wish Gala at Mohegan Sun. She also emcees the Mystic Aquarium Gala every year. You can call her Private Kerri-Lee as she cleared riding boot camp training and earned her silver spurs with the Connecticut Governor's Horse Guard, the oldest continuously running the troop in the nation, best known for accompanying George Washington and riding in the presidential inaugurations. She swapped her tracks for ballet shoes when she trained to dance in The Nutcracker in 2018 with the Hartt School of Dance at the University of Hartford. The Mayland family lives in central Connecticut but enjoys weekends living on the Connecticut coast, as well as spending time in Litchfield Hills, where Kerri-Lee operates an AirBNB. She loves interiors and landscape design, as much as she loves outdoor sports with her family - from diving, to hiking, skiing and horseback riding - you'll find Kerri-Lee keeping busy with it all. (Image via Shutterstock) CONNECTICUT - A few former NBC Connecticut news reporters separately have landed new jobs on various television stations, the two announced on their social media pages. The news was also first reported by Laurel. Isa Gutierrez, a graduate of Northwestern University, says she is leaving NBC Connecticut for a position at NBC in New York City. It's been an honor to report for you, Connecticut. Thank you to everyone at @nbcconnecticut and our viewers at home for welcoming me with open arms and teaching me so much in my time here 1/2 pic.twitter.com/p88sDBoggn- Isa Gutiérrez (@isagutierreznbc) December 31, 2019 I am so beyond excited to stay in the NBC family as I start my next chapter in NYC!! Much more about what I will do to come ... but for now, gotta get to packing! 2/2 #reporterlife #journalist #nbc- Isa Gutiérrez (@isagutierreznbc) December 31, 2019 Before she came to the Connecticut station, she logged hours on the Today Show, The Last Word with Lawrence O'Donnell on MSNBC and Dateline NBC, among others, according to her bio. I'm going to miss this incredible human Isa Gutiérrez (@isagutierreznbc) December 31, 2019 Sabina Kuriakosis, which has a wealth of credits to her name, recently took a job at WTNH-TV. The move is a homecoming of sorts for Kuriakose, who worked at NBC Connecticut six years ago before moving over to WTXF-TV in Philadelphia, Pa., and now is back in Connecticut. In addition, her work has appeared on KTBC-TV in Austin, Texas, and WRBW-TV in Orlando, Fla., among other stations. Thank you for being so warm & welcoming!! So happy to join this incredible team Sabina Kuriakose (@SabinaKuriakose) December 2, 2019 Gutierrez and Kuriakose aren't the only Connecticut TV personalities on the road in recent months. Jodi Latina was scheduled to return to WTNH on January 3 after a stint as New Britain Mayor Erin Stewart's chief of staff. Former WTNH anchors Scott McDonnell and Mario Boone also recently left the station for new opportunities, and last spring, longtime NBC Connecticut reporter Hanna Mordoh parted ways with the station, among others. Times Square will be nearly empty for this year's ball drop, but millions will likely tune in online. Here's how to watch for free.
